

A BUSY GARAGE AT SPEEDWAY

[That Man Gravelle]

Among the busy birds at the speedway these days is Leon Duray, who is to drive a Frontenac four in the big race. It will be his first appearance on the speedway, but by race time he will have had considerable experience. Duray has been practicing daily for some time under the watchful eye of Louis Chevrolet. Being a dirt-track driver of no mean skill, Duray had one natural fault to correct. In making the turns he took the outside, as from force of habit on dirt tracks, and thus skirted too close to the wall. Gradually he is learning to hug the rail. Duray claimed the dirt-track championship in 1920. He lives in Kansas City. The picture shows Duray and his mechanics at work in a speedway garage. Duray is seen stooping at the left of the picture.
