

SATURDAY, AUGUST 17, 1929.

NEW AIRPLANE TESTING PLANT

The Bureau of Standard's recently completed airplane motor testing station is one of the largest and newest of its kind. Arthur Chevrolet, Indianapolis racing motor designer and engineer, is shown at the right assisting in setting up a motor for tests. The motors are run for five hours at full speed before being approved.

—Underwood Photo.